State Street Farmers' Market opening for 15th consecutive year

You know spring is here when you drive down State Street in Bristol and there is a large crowd gathered in the 800 block very early on a Saturday morning. That's right; you will know the State Street Farmers' Market is open offering the freshest of seasonal vegetables, fruits, farm raised meats, and even some great brown eggs, that is if you get there early enough. If you are the crafty type and want to see what locals have created or seen on Pinterest this winter, the market is a great place to stop.

The market will open on Saturday, May 3 at 8:00 A.M. and be open every Saturday through the end of October. A Wednesday evening market opens in July and runs through September during the market season.

For a number of years the market has offered what has become a prized poster series. There are six posters in each yearly series and a new poster is available on the first Saturday of each month.

“We are excited like everyone else when the market opens. It's like homecoming week. Everyone who hasn't seen each other through the winter has a great time catching up,” said Mike Musick, Recreation Superintendent for the city. The market is located at 810 State Street Bristol, Tennessee at the country music mural.

“There are a limited number of vendor spaces still available. If someone would like to participate in the market it is a great atmosphere to spend your mornings in while making some extra cash,” Musick continued.

For more information on the market or about becoming a vendor, contact Mike Musick @ 423-764-4023 or email mmusick@bristoltn.org.
